3½ Million Spent To Modernize College Buildings

Improvements costing $3,504,682 have been made during the past eight years on Columbia College buildings, William J. White-side, Director of Buildings and Grounds, has made known. The buildings are Hamilton, Fayerweather, Schermerhorn and Havemeyer as well as Hartley, Livingston and John Jay Halls.

To modernize the principal teaching laboratories in Havemeyer, $1,063,682 was spent. As a result, College students now have the very best of chemistry equipment.

Changes made in Fayerweather, Schermerhorn and Hamilton cost $1,860,000. They provided for additional space for teaching purposes, modernization of lighting, heating and ventilation and central chilled water drinking systems.

To improve the three residence halls, $581,000 was spent. All rooms now contain new beds and mattresses. Lighting is gradually being modernized throughout the buildings. Each of the shower and toilet rooms sparkles with the latest in tile and chromium. An attractive decor now brightens the corridors of Hartley Hall. In addition, the main lounge in each of the three buildings has been refurbished and renovated.

"We believe that these improvements represent a sound policy," said Joseph P. Nye, Director of University Residence Halls, "because we want the students who live in our building to have the kind of facilities and atmosphere which will contribute to their enjoyment and their educational experience while at Columbia College."

"Particularly significant in the Hartley and Livingston Halls renovation program has been the interest and generous cooperation of M. Hartley Dodge '03."

Over 1,000 College students are housed in Hartley, Livingston and John Jay this year. That figure, Mr. Nye noted, combined with the 200 College students residing in fraternity houses, makes for the largest number of students living on the campus in the history of the College.

Infirmary Moves to St. Luke's; Earl Hall Now Religious Center

Big changes took place in Earl Hall last month.

The Columbia University Health Service moved to St. Luke's Hospital's newest annex, at Amsterdam Avenue and 114th Street. The space it occupied in Earl Hall for 30 years is being converted into meeting rooms and offices for religious counselors.

"For the first time in its 52-year history," said the Reverend John M. Krumm, Chaplain of the University, "Earl Hall is being used solely for the purpose it was intended."

He referred to the inscription over the east entrance which reads:

By WAYNE VAN ORMAN '28
President of the Association of the Alumni of Columbia College

This is the first appearance of "Columbia College Today." It is frankly experimental, designed as a medium to keep you up to date on Columbia College. It is sponsored by the Association of the Alumni of Columbia College and the Deans of the College.

Many of us—for lack of current information on Columbia—think of the College as it was ten or twenty years ago. This is not to imply that all is changed on Morningside. On the contrary, there is a reassuring sense of continuity to Columbia tradition. Yet we cannot escape the fact that time and growth and improvements do change institutions.

Given the facts on Columbia College—its leadership among colleges, its carefully selected and outstanding student body, its distinguished faculty—we hope you will gain a new, revitalized perspective on your own relationship to the College.

Let us have your opinion on "Columbia College Today" so we may be guided by your ideas. We hope to publish another issue at the end of the year and possibly a third in the spring.

Third Fund Makes Record; Hogan Will Head Fourth

The 3rd Annual Columbia College Fund campaign for scholarships increased its contributors by 900 and its dollar total by more than $70,000 over the last campaign thereby setting a record, declared its chairman, Benjamin J. Buttenwieser '19.

At the same time he made known that Frank S. Hogan '24, District Attorney of New York County, has accepted the post of Chairman of the 4th Annual Columbia College Fund which opens its campaign on February 16. Mr. Hogan, a member of the Columbia College Council, is a recipient of the 1954 Alexander Hamilton Medal. He is a past president of the Alumni Federation and of the College Alumni Association.

"Frank Hogan is a devoted alumnus," added Mr. Buttenwieser. "Under his dynamic leadership, the Columbia College Fund can look forward to another record year."

Surveying the results of the 3rd College Fund whose campaign ended on June 30, Mr. Buttenwieser reported as follows:

The Fund received $252,021 from 4,675 contributors. The previous record was for the 1952-53 campaign when $180,310 was received from 3,775 contributors. The current total exceeded the first campaign by $115,321 and 1,280 contributors. Almost twenty five percent of the alumni now support the Fund, compared to twenty percent last year and eighteen percent the first year.

Frank S. Hogan '24

Of the funds raised through the volunteer efforts of some 750 committee workers, representing

Fifty-Year Plan In Professions Ended for Seniors

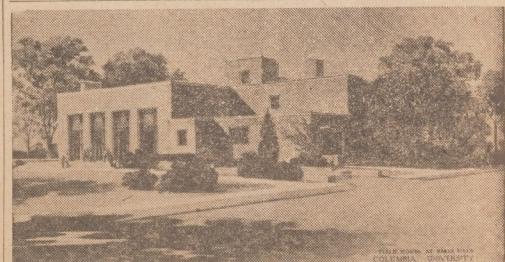

Columbia College begins its third century this semester with a change in its liberal arts education program.

In line with its pioneering role in that field—one which other great colleges have emulated—it eliminates the 50-year-old "professional option" program for juniors and seniors except those in engineering. The program becomes effective, said Dean Lawrence H. Chamberlain, for the Class of 1958 whose members will be required to include at least 24 points of study in some one department. These changes are expected to increase substantially the liberal arts content of the last two years.

The professional option plan permitted College seniors to spend their last undergraduate year as a graduate student in the University's professional schools of medicine, dentistry, law, engineering and architecture. It was originally instituted to insure that pre-professional students should have a minimum of three years of liberal arts education but as most graduate schools began to require a baccalaureate degree for admission, its purpose became lost.

"In its basic essentials," said Dean Chamberlain, "the new program requires each student to take at least a minimum of concentration and do some independent work in order to fulfill the requirements for graduation. In those instances where departments have not introduced a major, the student is required to complete at least four full-year courses (normally 24 points) in a single field including a full year senior seminar or its equivalent in which the work will be essentially independent in character."

"We hope that the new arrangement will encourage departments to re-examine their advanced course offerings in the interest of providing their students with greater opportunities for discovering and developing their own unique capacities."

President Grayson Kirk announced at the annual alumni reunion on October 23, that work would begin soon on the construction of the Alumni Wing of the Field House at Baker Field. The wing is shown in the foreground of the architect's drawing above. It will contain a large main lounge, a trophy room and various utility facilities for social functions. It is being built through gifts of alumni and others.

College Class Presidents Seek Close Student Ties

Theodore C. Garfield '24, Chairman of the newly-created Columbia College Class Presidents Association, speaking at its first general meeting on September 30 at the Columbia University Club, outlined the aims of the organization as follows:

1—To provide a closer liaison between the class unit and the Alumni Association, the Dean's Office and the College itself.

2—To create a meeting ground for the exchange of ideas between the classes.

3—To compile a directory of all alumni interested in participating in College affairs.

The aims of the Class Presidents Association were endorsed at the meeting by Dean Chamberlain and by Aaron W. Berg '24, Vice President and Chairman of the Standing Committee of the Association of Alumni. The Alumni Association sponsors the new group.

Science Topic Of 7th Forum On Democracy

"Science and Democracy" will be the subject of the seventh annual Columbia College Forum on Democracy on February 24, 25, and 26, 1955 declared Forum chairman, Edwin B. Matzke '24C.

Over 140 students representing more than 65 secondary schools have attended the Forum each year since its inception in 1949. Its purpose is to stimulate the interest of secondary school students in the problems of democracy in American life. In addition the Forum serves to acquaint them with Columbia College.

Backed By Alumni

The Forum on Democracy was conceived by the Committee on Secondary Schools of the Association of Alumni of Columbia College. The Association, together with the Deans' Office, jointly sponsors the annual event.

The subject of the first annual Forum seven years ago was "Freedom and Democracy." In succeeding years the Forum has discussed: Freedom and Security (1950); Democracy in a Divided World (1951); Leadership and Democracy (1952); Education and Democracy (1953); The Arts and Democracy (1954).

Robert N. Hertz of 709 Galvin Avenue, Roselle, New Jersey, a student who attended the 1954 Forum, wrote to Dean Chamberlain, as follows:

Stimulated by Forum

"Yesterday I returned home after spending one of the most complete three days of my seventeen years. In fact 'And so to sleep again' has been my theme song for the past sixteen hours.

"Well, what did you learn, Bob?" everyone asked me this morning.

"For a minute, I stammered uncertainly. Was there a positive answer I could give?

"I learned only one thing this weekend," I finally said. "I learned to be a better and more aware American." Neither my parents nor friends—not one person—said 'what else did you learn?' Not one.

"If this is the purpose of these annual forums, we boys this year should have reversed the tables and given the professors an 'A' for achievement. I know I am correct in saying: 'When men of wisdom tell what they know, kids like us begin to grow.'"

"Finally, Dr. Chamberlain, let me say that as far as being a wonderful host, having friendly and fine young men, and giving education a Christmas wrapping, Columbia is the gem of my ocean."

"Title this theme 'thanks' if you will."

(a) the amount of unrestricted funds contributed by members of the class (some class totals include gifts for special purposes); and

(b) the monetary value of each scholarship award (scholarship stipends vary).

² In addition to the amount above, 38 members of the Class of 1904 College contributed to Columbia University $15,808.25 as their 50th Anniversary Gift.

³ In addition to the amount above, 55 members of the Class of 1914 College and Engineering contributed to Columbia University $52,871.00 as their 40th Anniversary Gift.

⁴ In addition to the amount above, 157 members of the Class of 1929 College contributed $22,671.71 to their 25th Anniversary Gift Fund; of which a portion was designated for the cost of the new 1929 Gates at 114th Street, Columbia campus, and a portion was allocated as a Class contribution toward the completion of the Alumni Wing of the Field House at Baker Field, with the balance (approximately $3,500) to be given to the Columbia College Fund for scholarships.

ly ill. All operative cases will continue to be handled by the hospital.

"Another innovation this year at Columbia," said Dr. Carl R. Wise, University Medical Officer, "is a compulsory health fee. Each full-time student is assessed $10 a semester for which he receives what virtually amounts to group coverage on many medical expenses including X-ray and infirmiry care."

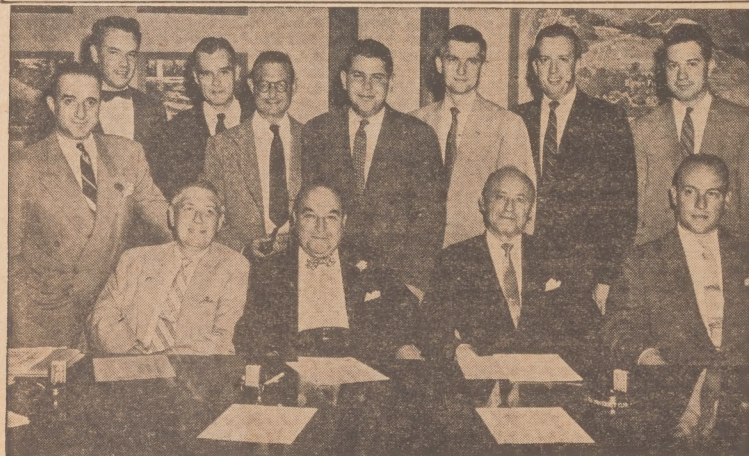

On the Health Service staff, in addition to Dr. Wise, are 15 part-time physicians; one full-time psychiatrist, Dr. J. Allison Montague; four full-time nurses and two laboratory technicians.

The total cost of remodeling

Earl Hall will be approximately $50,000, half of which has been provided through a generous gift from friends of the University. Chaplain Krumm made known.

"For the balance we look forward to additional gifts from outside sources," he said. "In addition to main-floor construction, which is being kept at a minimum, we are installing a new stage floor in the second-floor auditorium, as well as a proper curtain, both of which are badly needed."

Each denominational group will be delegated a suite of offices with space for student lounges. The second floor quarters, now being occupied by counselors and advisors, will be turned into student meeting rooms.

Alumni Supporting 124 Students

One hundred and twenty-four Columbia College students are on partial scholarships raised through the 3rd Annual Columbia College Fund, Dean Nicholas M. McKnight has announced. They include 21 seniors, 36 juniors, 30 sophomores and 37 freshmen. Two alumni classes—1919 and 1924—lead all other classes in the number of scholarship students sponsored, with ten each. Next is 1921 with six scholars, and 1923 with five.

"The number of students sponsored by alumni classes is dependent on the total of class contribution and on the size of the scholarship," said Dean McKnight. "This policy tangibly relates the individual gift to the class scholars."

Scholarship assistance has been the Fund's principal aim since its inception in 1951. According to Dean McKnight, the program stems from faculty and alumni conviction that the test of a liberal arts college is the quality of its student body.

20 States Represented

At present there are forty-seven New York State residents receiving scholarship aid. The others come from nineteen other states. There is one foreign student, Alexios E. Kokkinopoulos '58, of Spetsai, Greece, whose scholarship is sponsored by the Class of 1916.

"In each case a scholarship represents only partial assistance," said Dean McKnight, "since the average stipend is less than $700. The annual cost of attending Columbia is approximately $1,900. The scholarship is often the margin between financial ability and inability to attend."

"Dramatic evidence of the need for financial assistance is revealed in a survey made in 1953 of students entering institutions other than Columbia, although the College was their first choice. The survey shows that 74 per cent of these students gave inadequate financial assistance as the reason for not enrolling at Columbia."

Currently there are 520 students on scholarships at the College. Many are supported by special programs, temporary in nature, with selection controlled by the sponsoring group rather than the College. They include, in addition to the 124 class scholars, the following: 111 Ford Foundation scholars; 36 scholars sponsored by the Joint Industry Board of the Electrical Industry of New York, and Local 32B of the Building Service Employees International Union; 132 endowed scholars; 24 endowed class scholars; and 93 scholars supported by Columbia University funds.

Furey Lauds Ivy League Football Plan

By RALPH J. FUREY
Director of Physical Education and Intercollegiate Sports

While regulation for Ivy League sports goes back many years, football did not get a code until that historic day in 1945 when the eight Ivy presidents signed the first formal "Ivy Group Agreement." This document affirmed the Ivy intention of continuing football in such a way as to maintain the values of the game while keeping it in fitting proportion to the main purpose of academic life.

Amended several times—the latest revision having been adopted in February of 1954—this agreement differs from the practices of other conferences in the following main areas:

1. It prohibits athletic scholarships of any type.
2. It defines satisfactory progress towards the degree and other academic requirements as prerequisites for athletic eligibility.
3. It reaffirms the principle of academic control of intercollegiate athletics.
4. It prohibits post season games.
5. It prohibits out of season practice.
6. It forbids participation in post season "charity games" by both squad members and coaches.
7. Provides for a compulsory round robin schedule in football beginning in 1956.

The Ivy Group Agreement is directly supervised by three committees:

1. The Policy Committee: Composed of the Presidents, whose decision on top level policy is final.
 2. The Eligibility Committee: Composed of the eight Deans, who review jointly all problems in this area.
 3. The Administration Committee: Composed of the Directors of Athletics, who have the responsibility for the operation of the intercollegiate program.
- It is most encouraging to note that all three committees have thus far worked together in complete harmony. For example, the problem of arranging a round robin schedule for football was quite involved. It not only required the fitting together of 56 games but also the protection of traditional dates. The directors all cooperated in grand style and what was thought to be an impossibility a few years ago, will become a reality beginning in 1956.

Unfortunately, the general public, as well as a minority of our Ivy alumni, are under the impression that the President's Agreement is a de-emphasis of Ivy athletics. The facts do not support this assumption. After a careful study, the Ivy Agreement indicates that our presidents are not de-emphasizing, but merely re-emphasizing the fact that football and other sports should be properly integrated into the educational objectives of the colleges and universities of the United States.

Insofar as Columbia is concerned, we would like to continue to field the best teams possible within the spirit of the Ivy Code. This means that we hope to continue to attract the type of student to Columbia who has done well both on the athletic field and in the classroom; that we will continue to try for the best possible coaching, just as the University insists on the best possible instruction for Physics, Mathematics or English; and that we are confident that we will be able to continue to field representative teams whose performance against traditional opponents will be a source of interest and pride to the whole Columbia family.

Deans of the College Once Were Salesmen

McKnight, Tobacco Pioneer, Helped Open China Market

Nicholas M. McKnight, the College's Dean of Students, regards himself as a lucky man. He knew what he wanted and he got it. What he wanted was to work for Columbia and he has, for 30 years, not counting the four he spent there as an undergraduate.

The one time he was away from the campus he went about as far as he could go—to China as a cigarette salesman plugging Chesterfields. It was not for long because they did not satisfy the Chinese. But he found out what cigarette did and gave it to them.

China was the last place he wanted to go. In fact, he had his fill of traveling. From the time he was born in Danville, Kentucky, on December 19, 1899, until he was ten years old, he moved from city to city with his parents. His father was a sales executive of Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company.

Teaches Self to Read

His early childhood was a lonesome one. His mother spent much time reading to him and, at the age of five, having had no formal instruction, he was able to read.

His father was transferred to New York in 1909 and there the son remained until he was graduated from Columbia. His family took a house in Rutherford, New Jersey, and while the furniture was being moved in he sat on the porch and watched a little girl next door practicing croquet.

"I heard her mother call out to her: 'Ask the little boy to play croquet with you,'" said Dean McKnight. "And not knowing my name she said: 'Little boy, do you want to play croquet with me?' But I said: 'No.' My mother overheard me and called out: 'Say yes to the little girl.' So she and I played croquet. That is how I met my wife."

Active On Campus

His activities at Columbia were varied. He was an undergraduate Phi Beta Kappa; member of the Student Board and of the Nacoms; president of Sigma Chi and editor of Spectator. As a campus journalist, he introduced departmental coverage of cultural news and embarked upon a crusade that eventually obtained an athletic field worthy of Columbia. His department heads were Richard Watts, Jr., drama editor; Henry Morton Robinson, literary editor; and Charles Wagner, music editor. It was a trio of which the great downtown dailies could have been proud.

Before World War I the university obtained from the state the right to fill in the land at 116th Street and the Hudson River for athletic purposes. That project lay dormant until Editor McKnight chose it as a cause to champion.

The first fruit came in the form of a letter from President Butler to the effect that a committee to study the site had been selected. It consisted of three trustees, three alumni and three students, one of the latter being McKnight.

The committee dropped the 116th Street proposal because of prohibitive costs and some time later took an option on 27 acres of what McKnight called "Jungle". It was the Dyckman property at 218th Street and Broadway. The option expired on December 31.

On that day, President Butler succeeded in persuading George F. Baker to put up the $750,000 to buy the property. Subsequently, Baker contributed another $250,000 with which adjoining lots were bought and made a part of the Dyckman estate.

President Butler performed another good deed on that last day of 1921. He sent a cable to Shanghai where the crusading editor of Spectator was then working, to inform him that Columbia at last had a new athletic field.

The China interval began in the late spring of 1921 with the announcement by McKnight's father that Liggett and Myers were sending him to Shanghai to launch the sale of its products in the Far East. Mrs. McKnight refused to go unless her son went. Nicholas refused to go unless his sweetheart went. A good sport, then and always, she agreed, and Phyllis Ogden and Nicholas McKnight job at the university for one who was neither a scholar nor a teacher.

In January 1924, acting on an impulse, he called on his old friends, Dean Hawkes, Secretary Fackenthal and Levering Tyson, then in charge of the Home Study department. He told them of his desire for a job. They held out hope but McKnight thought theirs was merely a polite gesture. He did not know that they had just been appointed a committee to find the right man to head the Appointments Office which had been without a director for five years. He got the job.

In the winter of 1931, his work came to the attention of Percy Straus who asked him to survey Macy's employment program and make recommendations for its modernization. Having no desire to leave Columbia, McKnight sought Fackenthal's advice.

Becomes Associate Dean Fackenthal's suggestion was to were married on June 4, three days after he was graduated. On July 4, the McKnights and the new member of the family sailed from San Francisco for Shanghai. Nicholas had been hired as a foreign salesman.

Finds Burley Unpopular

The Chinese taste in cigarettes was not for burley tobacco of which Chesterfields were made. They wanted Virginia tobacco and the first job of the McKnights was to create a brand of that leaf.

Young McKnight had charge of 12 Chinese salesmen who spoke no English, but he soon was able to converse with them in their language. He checked them in in the morning and out at night and called at shops to see how their cigarettes were being displayed.

Ill health brought the McKnights home in 1923. Neither Nicholas' wife nor his father was able to withstand Shanghai's damp climate any longer.

Returns to New York

Back in New York, Liggett and Myers appointed McKnight sales manager for Manhattan north of 110th Street, the Bronx, Westchester and southern Connecticut. He devoted all of his energy to the job but found his enthusiasm for it waning. Each time business took him past Columbia he wondered whether there was a job at the university for one who was neither a scholar nor a teacher. McKnight was offered the post of Dean Hawkes' assistant. But Hawkes would not have him in that capacity. He asked that McKnight be named associate dean and he was. As a result, McKnight turned down the Macy offer and moved over to Hamilton Hall.

Upon Hawkes' death in May 1943, McKnight was acting dean until the appointment of Dean Harry J. Carman. He was named to the newly-created post of Dean of Students in November 1949.

Today Dean McKnight is a member of the University Committee on Athletics; chairman of the University Eligibility Committee; Columbia's representative on the Ivy Group Eligibility Committee; chairman of the Advisory Committee on Student Loans; chairman of Pampathria, the fraternity governing body, a unique distinction because on most campuses the chairman is an undergraduate; member of the Kings Crown Advisory Committee; former member of the N.C.A.A. Council; former president and governor of the Columbia University Club.

He has served as a member of the Standing Committee of the College Alumni Association and as a director of the Alumni Federation. At present he is a member of the Advisory Committee for the Alumni News.

Chamberlain, Hosiery Agent, Paid Dividends in Education

Lawrence H. Chamberlain or "Larry", as the Dean of Columbia College is called by hundreds of alumni who know him either as a teacher or in his present and more formidable role, is an example of an investment in education that paid off in a big way.

Why he was chosen he does not know and perhaps never will. How it happened he remembers vividly:

The place was the University of Idaho in Moscow, U.S.A. The time was the end of March of his freshman year. The family financial situation had become so acute he could not finish the semester. He had to get a full-time job right away.

The sad part of it was that when his mother, his older brother, William, and he moved to Moscow the summer before, prospects were bright. His mother left a secure job in their home town of Challis, Idaho, and opened a boarding house to help her sons through college. Larry got a part-time job in the press room of the Daily Idahoan while William went to the military academy at West Point. Within a few months his mother was forced to give up the boarding house business for lack of customers. Although she took a job as a cook, their situation did not improve and Larry prepared to quit school.

Professor Offers Help

While he was making the rounds of instructor's offices to have his marks entered, he was asked to call on Claude C. Crawford, professor of education, a man he had never met. To his astonishment, Professor Crawford opened the interview by trying to dissuade him from leaving the university. He argued that the only job Larry could get was a laborer's but if he completed his sophomore year, he could earn much more as a grade school teacher. Moreover, said Professor Crawford, he was in the market for a good investment and Larry had all the qualifications providing he would pay six per cent from his earnings as a school teacher. Larry agreed, walked out of Professor Crawford's home with a check for $250 and went back to his classes.

To this day the impression created by Professor Crawford's belief in the soundness of education as an investment still profoundly affects Chamberlain.

Had Professor Crawford taken the time to investigate the "company" in which he had put his money, he perhaps would have regretted that he had not put up more. Chamberlain was born in Challis on March 15, 1906. He came from a family that worked hard for everything it got. His mother and father were separated when he was 13 months old and she became the sole support of the two children. A sixth grade grammar school education was no handicap to her election as county treasurer, an office she held for many terms while she brought up her children in Challis.

"Her vocabulary was better than mine and her grasp of public affairs was admirable," says her son, now a leader in higher education and an authority in political science.

Worked On Rock Crusher

During the summer he worked on a rock crusher. The hardest part of that job was getting it. He had to convince a skeptical boss that his slight build — he was 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighed 140 pounds — was no handicap in swinging a sledge hammer. After a few days' trial he went on the payroll and became an expert in breaking "dumbos", rocks that defied the biggest laboring "stiffs" in the quarry. Through a study of seams, he had figured out where to strike the strategic blow. Previously, such rocks had to be broken for the crusher with dynamite.

At the end of his sophomore year at the university, an odd turn of events brought him back to Challis to teach the 5th and 6th grades. His predecessor, a woman, had been forced to quit because she was unable to maintain discipline among her 44 pupils, some of whom were of high school age. The superintendent thought a male teacher would be able to control the unruly element led by two girls, 15 and 16 years old.

During the first hour of his first day, there was a rap at the class room door. The police were there. They wanted the two girls. He sent them out of the room and they never returned. From that time on discipline was no problem. The pupils thought he was responsible for getting rid of the troublemakers and he never disilluminated them.

Job Fails to Pay Off

His salary was only $110 a month. Thus economically it did not pay off as Crawford had predicted. He could have earned more as a laborer. Nevertheless, he remained for two years, repaid the loan and today regards the experience as one that taught him more about teaching than any job of his career.

When he finished teaching in the summer of 1928 he went to work for a hosiery firm in San Francisco. His territory was a neighborhood of apartment houses. At first he was frightened away by signs prohibiting salesmen but he soon learned to ring bells until someone buzzed open the front door. If he was put out he would go to the next house and start over again. He averaged $40 a week and worked for six months hating it on the last day as much as he did the first.

He returned to the University of Idaho, got his bachelor's degree in 1930 and married a childhood sweetheart who taught school. He obtained his master's degree in political science in 1932 and later was admitted to Phi Beta Kappa.

He joined the Columbia College faculty as a lecturer in political science in 1941 and in 1945 was awarded a doctorate and an assistant professorship. He became full professor in 1949. When the time came to appoint a successor for Harry J. Carman, who retired as dean in January 1950, Chamberlain was the unanimous choice of the faculty.

Author of Books

He is author of "President, Congress and Legislation", "American Foreign Policy", (with R. C. Snyder) and "Loyalty and Legislative Action". He is Vice Chairman of the American Civil Liberties Union National Committee on Freedom in Education, and is a member of the American Political Science Association, Academy of Political Science, American Academy of Political and Social Sciences and Society for Public Administration.

He attends class meetings and takes an active part in alumni activities. It was his recommendation, in consultation with alumni leaders, that brought into being the three-year-old College Council.

Dean Chamberlain says that he and his wife are small town westerners who love New York. They have been Giant fans since they came here, have suffered with them in defeat and rejoiced in their victories.

College Book Review

By Forest R. Lombaer '35

Mr. Lombaer, Personnel Administrator of Macy's New York, who reviews "A History of Columbia College on Morningside," writes from the view point of the typical alumnus. In his undergraduate days he was intercollegiate fencing champion and captain of the fencing team.

The Bicentennial has brought many good things to Morningside. One of its special dividends is the nineteen-volume Bicentennial History of the University. Columbia College men of all vintages will find particular interest in the volume titled "A History of Columbia College on Morningside," produced under the editorship of Dwight Miner.

The plan for the series restricted the volume to 300 pages; in this limited compass the contributors have told the story of Columbia's fifty years on the Heights, told it in a way that should make every alumnus want to read it—and many who read will want to own it as a permanent record. For this is more than an analysis of the academic developments of the Morningside era; there is a skillful rendering of the whole picture of the life of the students, the faculty and the curriculum.

The history is warmed throughout by men who have played a part in the events and developments of which they write. A Prologue and Epilogue were supplied by Irwin Edman, whose recent death so saddened those of us who knew him in our campus days. Lionel Trilling and Justus Buchler provide a remarkably organized account of the developments in curriculum that have kept the College in its place of leadership in the liberal arts. These two chapters make a connected history that shows each of us the events that had gone before we entered the College, the state of the curriculum while we were undergraduates (and the changes that were in process, without our realizing it, during those years), plus a coherent review of the growth and development that have come since.

The most delightful section, to me, is Charles Everett's chapter, "Most Glad to Teach," which evokes the personalities—and the characters—of the faculty in the last twenty-five years. They all walk through the pages—Hawkes and Coss and Weaver, Hayes, Steeves, Krutch, Scleroff, Casey, Taylor and more than a score of others who will be memorable to the men of the early 30's (like me) and of later classes.

Fon Boardman gives us the highlights of Kings Crown activities over the years, and a brief look at social life on and off the campus. Jack Arbolino records in brief form the major athletic triumphs and trials of the Light Blue and reviews the developments that have led to the present organization of the Department of Physical Education and Intercollegiate Athletics. The final chapter, contributed by Gene Hawes, rounds out the picture by tracing the history of the Alumni Federation and the part played in it by graduates of the College.

The book should find its place in the library of many of the men of Morningside.

Mankiewicz '42 Wins $10,000 Harper Prize

Don M. Mankiewicz '42, has been chosen the winner of the $10,000 Harper Prize Novel contest for his new novel "Trial," scheduled for January 3, 1955 publication by Harper. The manuscript was selected over 885 other entries.

Mr. Mankiewicz, whose short stories have appeared in many national magazines, is the author of "See How They Run," published in 1951. His father, the late Herman J. Mankiewicz '17, was a screen writer, receiving an Academy Award for his authorship of "Citizen Kane." His uncle is Joseph L. Mankiewicz '28, holder of four Academy Awards.

Alumni Roll Is Swelled By Paid Members

An all-time record of paid memberships has been achieved by the Association of the Alumni of Columbia College, announced Aaron Berg, '24, Association Vice President and Chairman of the Standing Committee. Mr. Berg also hailed the progress of the Association's program of encouraging closer alumni cooperation with undergraduate groups, and stimulating alumni class participation in College affairs.

"We have reached," Mr. Berg said, "a new high of 5,387 dues-paying members. While encouraging, this is less than 30 percent of our potential. This year we have set as our objective 7,500 members, or approximately 40 percent of the alumni body."

Association dues are $5.00 annually.

Mr. Berg reported that the Association plans a more active undergraduate program, citing as an example the Class Sponsors program which calls for one or more alumni to assume sponsorship of a class in an advisory capacity.

"Our aim," asserted Mr. Berg, "is to have the right kind and most worthy boy come to Columbia College; to assure that he gets what he expected to get while there, and to make him feel that we as alumni are truly interested in him."

Also announced by Mr. Berg is the formation of a Committee on Public Relations to present the "Columbia College story" to alumni and public.

Five Sets of Twins Confuse Professors

Like many a school throughout the land, Columbia College down through the years has seen twin brothers in its student body. Most times it was one set of twins; one year saw even two sets. But never had admission authorities passed upon five sets—not until this year.

What makes the arrival of this record number of twins on Morningside even more unique is that they are found in the Columbia College Freshman Class which numbers only 630 students.

Three states are represented in the unique group—Massachusetts, Connecticut and New York. Six students are from New York and the other states supply two apiece.

A Tribute For Edman

By Charles W. Everett
Professor of English

Irwin Edman '17, Johnsonian Professor of Philosophy, died suddenly on September 4, 1954. Professor Everett, colleague and friend, has written the following for "Columbia College Today."

Irwin Edman was a man who could turn experience of any kind into language which recreated the tone and essence of the experience. If wit was needed, he was witty; if complexity had to be dealt with, he was clear and lucid. If painting or music or the fine arts were the subject, the language too would be beautiful, the organization harmonious, convincing one that here was an experience one could not afford to miss. He was one of the great luminaries of the college, known and loved far beyond the walls of the University.

His connection with Columbia had been continuous and complete for 41 years, though he was only 58 when he died. He graduated in 1917 and became a lecturer in the philosophy department the next year. He was a New Yorker and a Columbia man in the best sense of the word, for he was completely free of provinciality or parochialism. He lectured at Harvard and at California, at the University of Brazil and at the Sorbonne. Naturally, when he lectured at the Sorbonne he lectured in French, and one suspects that if he did not lecture in Portuguese in Brazil that at least he quoted from memory some long, beautiful, and fitting passage from Camoens.

His friendships included people in far places as different as Santayana and Somerset Maugham. They included all his colleagues, and they included all the students who through the years had taken his courses. He never wasted his wit in castigating fools or satirizing folly, for he had better things to do. Why talk about fools when art and wisdom and poetry exist in spite of them? He will be missed by all of us.

Thomas W. Chrystie Is Named Columbia's 51st Alumni Trustee

By a formal vote of the Board of Trustees on October 4, Thomas Witter Chrystie '24 became the 51st Alumni Trustee of Columbia University. He replaces Lester D. Egbert '14 who this year completed the six-year term of office.

Mr. Chrystie was nominated by the Alumni Trustee Nominating Committee, representing twelve associations of alumni, local clubs, general and sustaining member groups of the Alumni Federation of Columbia University.

He is the second member of his family to be elected to an alumni trusteeship. His father, the late Thomas Ludlow Chrystie, '92, served as an alumni trustee from 1920 to 1926.

The Chrystie name is traditional at Columbia and in New York City. Chrystie Street, on the lower east side, is named after Tom Chrystie's great grand uncle, Lt. Colonel John Chrystie of the Class of 1806 of Kings College. A great grandfather, several times removed—the Reverend John Albert Weygand—was an original trustee of Kings College in 1754. His great grandfather was Thomas Witter Chrystie of the Class of 1828. The Chrysties are currently represented at the College by the new alumni trustee's son, T. Ludlow Chrystie III, '55 who is Secretary of the Columbia College Board of Student Representatives.

Born in New York City in 1902, Tom Chrystie attended Taft School in Watertown, Connecticut. At the College he earned his Varsity C as stroke in crew. He was a member of the Student Board and class president in his Junior year.

Recipient of an LL.B. from Columbia Law School in 1928, Mr. Chrystie was admitted to the bar the following year. He is a member of the firm of Webster, Sheffield and Chrystie. He is married to the former Helen Duell, and they have, in addition to "Young Tom," one daughter, Mabel Halliwell.

Third Fund Makes Record; Hogan Will Head Fourth

all of the alumni classes, $204,050 was contributed by 4,307 alumni. The parents of students now in the College contributed $5,146. Gifts from friends totaled $42,825.

The men of 1924, under the leadership of Chairman Theodore C. Garfield, set a record among all of the alumni classes for the amount of money raised with a total of $32,354. Under Class Chairman Bartlett Saunders the Class of 1953 lead in total number of gifts with approximately 35 per cent of the class contributing.

The best class participation was achieved by 1905—Chairman, Ronald F. Riblet—with 42 per cent contributing.

"Special recognition must go to the Class of 1954, and its Fund Chairman, Howard Falberg," said Mr. Buttenwieser. "Even before leaving the campus the class achieved a participation figure of over sixty percent."

Although the express purpose of the College Fund is to support scholarships, the contributor is free to designate how his gift is to be used. Mr. Buttenwieser emphasized that the Fund hopes ultimately to serve "as the agency for all gifts, whatever their purpose, of College alumni to Columbia."

Coordinating the College Fund campaign is the Executive Committee headed during the 3rd Fund by Arthur V. Smith '31, Executive Chairman, and including these members:

Newest addition to the campus are these tennis and handball courts in the Grove. They replace the two eliminated on South Field and give students three additional courts.

Columbia's Sports Writer Takes Look at the Future

By HOWARD LEVINE

Director, Sports Information

Football:

The Columbia football problem in 1954, the 25th Anniversary for Coach Lou Little, is one of rebuilding and slimmness. Neither is new to Morningside football nor Lou Little.

The Lions lost a good bulk of their 1953 line and have felt the pinch in the forward wall primarily. This partly offsets a good group of backs.

Cross-Country:

The picture in cross-country is about the same as last fall. We will again have a fair cross-country squad. Bulwark of the team, as they were last year, will be Wilfred Storz and Bill Zboray. They finished first and second for Columbia in every race last fall, when the Lion won a dual and a triangular meet, finished second in another triangular meet and lost two dual meets. Coach Dick Mason does not expect too much help from a weak freshman team of last year.

In the winter sports, here is how things look at this early date.

Basketball:

Prospects do not look good for Lou Rossini's quintet. Last winter, the Lions had their first losing season since 1945, winning only 11 and losing 13. There doesn't appear to be reason to expect much improvement this winter.

Five lettermen have graduated—top scorer Jerry Gordon, Captain Larry Wilkove, defensive ace George Fickelsen, leading reserve Ed Lehman and substitute center Ed Leede. The best returning players are center Frank Thomas and guard Charlie Brown, second and third high scorers as sophomores last winter: captain-elect Ron McPhee, Herb Kutlow and John Naley. Promising sophomores are Chet Forte and Ted Dwyer, guards, and forward Bob Lehner.

The Lions should do better than last fall. But they will not match recent Columbia quintets.

Wrestling:

Dick Waite's grapplers won four of their first five matches last season but wound up by losing five of their last six.

Three of the top eight men have graduated, Henry Littlefield, heavyweight, and Captain Bob Sherry, 167-pounder, both won eight and lost three. Leo Cirino, 137-pounder, won six of ten. The top returning men are Captain-elect Harry Scott, 7-3-1 as a sophomore and Harold Powell, 6-5. Other experienced men back who should help considerably are Tom Morgan and Dale Granger.

Fencing:

The fencers couldn't possibly improve on last winter's record. They were the first Lion fencing team to go undefeated during the season, winning 11 straight. They won or shared every Eastern fencing championship, including the three-weapon title—and shared the NCAA championship.

Irv DeKoff's swordsmen do not figure to match that achievement, one of the best in collegiate fencing history.

DeKoff loses seven important letter men. He has four experienced men back in action but none in epee. Ralph De Marco and Stan Zinberg return in foil and Captain-elect Barry Pariser and Gerry Kaufman in sabre. Two promising sophomore epeemen—Nyles Ayers and Ray Ogren—help there. Other sophomore hopefuls include fencers Bernie Hladik and Larry Guarino and sabreman Ed Magnani.

Swimming:

Like the wrestlers, Ed Kennedy's swimmers also had the end season blues last winter. They won four of seven to start the season and then won only one of their last seven meets.

But also like the grapplers, the mermen should improve this winter. They lose only two high-scoring swimmers—Jon Mirsky and John Timoney. Returning are a large group of potentially good men led by veterans Ross Gieco, Bruce Hoy, Pete Martin, Dave Orrik, Al Sacknoff, Gus Stukey and Sheldon Wiederhern. A quintet of sophomores will also help the varsity—sprinters Ed Heiser and Ward Armstrong and free stylers Lewis Brown, Tom Rowan and Nick Zukov.

Track:

The graduation of Captain Fred Schlereth and Al Thompson just about wiped out Columbia's track team. Two of Morningside's greatest athletes, they did most of Columbia's scoring last year.

Pole vaulter Ralph Longworth and miler Wilfred Storz are the top returning trackmen. There are just a few promising sophomores available.

Know Them?

Here are the names of those whose photographs appear on pages 1 and 3:

1917. Howard Dietz, librettist. Mr. Dietz is the author of such musical plays as "Bandwagon," "The Little Show," "Three's A Crowd," "Inside U.S.A." He is also a vice president of MGM.

1934. Herman Wouk, author. Won Pulitzer Prize in 1952 for "The Caine Mutiny." Once a writer for comedian Fred Allen, Mr. Wouk is also author of "Aurora Dawn," "City Boy," and a play, "The Traitor."

1909. V. K. Wellington Koo, diplomat. Chinese ambassador to United States since 1948 and a former ambassador to Great Britain. He has served as Chairman of the Chinese delegation to the U.N. Assembly.

1934. James C. Hagerty, government official. Press secretary to President Eisenhower. He served as executive assistant to Governor Thomas E. Dewey for ten years and as his press secretary for two years.

1910. William Langer, legislator. Senator from North Dakota and Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary. Former governor of his home state, he was elected to the United States Senate in 1940 and was twice re-elected.

1902. Arthur Garfield Hays, lawyer. National Director of American Civil Liberties Union, Mr. Hays is the author of several books on subject of civil liberties and is a contributor to The Nation and other magazines.

1929. Harold A. Rousselot, investment counselor. A partner of Orvis Brothers & Company, director of the Commodity Exchange Rubber Clearing Association, Inc. and chairman of University Athletics Committee.
